Lines & Lessons (2)

miscellaneous · December 22, 2025

Someone loved the Lord but did not know whether the Lord loved him. He was told that God's love for us is the root and our love for him is the fruit. If the fruit is there, the root must also be there.

*

We will forget the dazzling color of a poisonous snake once it has bitten us. In the same way, we will forget the glamour of sin once we reap its bitter consequences.

*

Spurgeon was once very depressed. He therefore did not preach himself, but wanted to be strengthened by someone else's sermon. The preacher gave a sermon that Spurgeon himself had given some time before! Nevertheless, it gave him courage. “Now I have experienced that what had such a great effect on others also had an effect on me.”

*

The author of a bestseller does not know his readers. However, this is not the case with the bestseller of world history, the Bible.

*

A lunar eclipse only occurs when there is a full moon. We only become dark when we think we are shining brightly.

Source https://thebiblestudy.site/article/lines-lessons-2/